BECOME THE LEADER YOU ARE MEANT TO BE

Future school and business leaders get their start here. Roosevelt's school leadership programs provide licensed teachers with individualized pathways to become principals and bilingual coordinators. Our MA degree in Training and Development shows business professionals how to lead employee learning within small business and corporate settings.

All of our leadership programs provide students with intensive focus on the needs of diverse learners and employees, individualized coaching in field and clinical experiences, and integrated opportunities for content and professional learning. Our outstanding clinical and research faculty provides innovative instruction that deepens knowledge of best practices used in Chicagoland schools and businesses.

EXPAND YOUR KNOWLEDGE BASE

Licensed teachers aiming to improve their instructional skills get their start here.

Roosevelt's advanced educator programs provide innovative professional development for teachers who want to make a greater impact on their students' learning. Our programs focus on improving reading and literacy instruction, meeting the needs of bilingual and ESL students, and supporting learners with special needs. Degree programs are offered entirely online and in hybrid formats, which incorporate face-to-face study during the summer months. Upon completion of each program, licensed teachers are eligible to add one or more endorsements to their Illinois teaching licenses.

Roosevelt also provides licensed teachers opportunities to earn endorsements without enrolling in a degree program. Non-degree students can enroll in up to six courses (18 credit hours) without declaring a major, while benefiting from the same high-quality instruction provided to degree-seeking students.

COMMIT TO HELPING

At the heart of our counseling programs is a commitment to helping people meet life's challenges, a core value of Roosevelt University. Counseling students are specially trained for trauma and diversity and complete intensive internships at local schools and community agencies. They apply their knowledge gained in the classroom to the real world and thereby better their communities.

Our nationally accredited programs are designed for full- and part-time students and satisfy academic requirements for licensure as a clinical mental health counselor or school counselor. A robust student organization — the Roosevelt Counseling Association — provides valuable peer support and access to a strong network of alumni and professional contacts. Outstanding full-time faculty facilitate transformational out-of-class learning experiences, including study abroad opportunities.

IMPACT LEARNERS AND COMMUNITIES

Roosevelt's newly redesigned teacher preparation programs prepare candidates to work democratically with diverse children and families, including those with special needs and second language backgrounds. Our programs provide individualized coaching and foster inclusive, engaging relationships among teacher candidates, faculty, school practitioners and learners. Content courses are integrated to facilitate innovative teaching and learning. Completion leads to Illinois teaching credentials.

Strong school and district partnerships lie at the heart of these programs. We immerse teacher candidates intensively in diverse school and community cultures, nurturing social justice leadership skills and coaching candidates toward career success.
